“ Miss Debbie words can't explain how sad I am about your passing. You always lit up the room. It's been really hard not hearing your voice, hearing your laugh, or continuously losing to you at cards n dice. lol. Life feels incomplete now but I'm finishing the house...I know you'll be able to see it from above. Love always ❤️👍 oh and I will always have Jerry's six

“ One of my favorite memories with Ms. Debbie, among the hundreds of games of Zilch, was a single conversation in the hospital. We started off talking about our favorite and least favorite Thanksgiving foods and slowly moved to talking about different Christmas traditions. She talked about how when Zo and Jerry were little she would make Christmas sugar cookies and other “fun” Christmas desserts. She also told me about exciting it was to continue the tradition with Salem. She also talked about the time she had to finish cooking Thanksgiving dinner by herself (I think she was only 12 or 13) because her mom went into labor. Ms. Debbie was so wise and had such a nurturing and comforting soul. My family and I were so lucky to have her in our lives, and we can't wait to see her again. I send my condolences and deepest sympathy to Jerry and Zo. You both lost a wonderful woman and although she is gone, she will NEVER be forgotten. May she rest in peace in heaven.

“ Jerry and Zo, you were so lucky to have such a sweet- souled Mom who loved unconditionally. I was drawn to her from the moment I met her. Thank you for sharing her with our family. We loved her dearly. Life will not be the same without her. We were just getting started... I'm so sorry. Love you both.

“ Last year on her 69th birthday I took her on a cruise to the Bahamas. It was a 4 day cruise to freeport and bimini, and the moment we set sail and hit the open water she looked at me and said, "This is the best birthday ever, I could die happy right now", I replied "Can you at least wait til we finish enjoying the trip" 🙄 I love my mom so much, she was my best friend, my hero, my rock and im glad we got to make some good memories together these last few years.
