“ Mom, as much as my heart aches and as much as I miss talking with you everyday, I'm so happy and relieved for you that you are finally out of the long pain and suffering you've had to endure so much of your life. I still talk to you every morning while sitting on my back porch drinking my coffee, just as we used to do daily on the phone. It honestly almost feels that you are there listening to every word. I have to believe that...knowing you are now in heaven, that you hear and see and are still there helping guide, direct, and support me for without that, I couldn't bear your lose. The selfish part of me wants to hear your voice and see you again. But I can honestly say with conviction, I have no regrets...nothing was left unsaid or undone where our relationship was concerned. That is what gets me through each day without you. Can't wait to see you again one day and hear your giggle and listen to your crazy sense of humor. Until then, I will continue talking to you everyday. And when you can, please let me know you hear me. I sincerely need to know you do. Until we meet in heaven....##imported-begin##Your daughter, Patty##imported-end##

“ Our sympathy is with you during this difficult time. We did not know Mrs. Collins but from listening to Adrienne talk about her Grandmother, she sounded like a wonderful person. May your life time of memories bring you comfort.
