“ My Dad and Karen's Dad were brothers. A little more than a decade ago while then living in Atlanta, we (wife, Jennifer) and I were heading to Evansville to meet my elderly parents who had to have a test at a local hospital. Cousin Karen happened to be at the hospital and coincidentally ran into Mom and Dad. Rather than say hello and move on, she decided to stay with them—for a few hours—until we arrived. I hadn't seen Karen in many years, but upon saying goodbye, she told my Mom and Dad with her big smile she was there for them in Evansville whenever they needed anything. She had adjusted her own schedule that afternoon — on the spur of the moment— to help her Uncle and Aunt. That was the Karen I knew, an empathy for others and a heart of gold. It would be the last time I saw her, and my last beautiful memory of her.
