“ I have not known Todd long, but on the days that I came to the jobsite, he was always smiling and had such a positive attitude. The very first time I met Todd, I almost backed into him with my car lol. I row down my window frantically apologizing and he said oh no that was my fault are you ok. Then he starts making jokes about it. That's the kind of person Todd was. Heaven gained a good one.

I met Todd after I started dating his Mom. Therefore I got to know his family and quite well before he got married. He was a very diligent and hard working heavy equipment operator. He and the company he worked for performed many repairs to the city's water main breaks during the winter and summer; all very undesirable jobs. He had great pride in all that he did. He evidently was able to meet the right woman and start a family. I do believe he was happy at the end and I'm very proud to have known him. Any person who has known is surely missing this fine person.

“ I have not known Todd long, but when I visited the jobsite he was working on, he was the bright spot in my day. He was always so happy and upbeat that you would walk away with a smile on your face. It will be a little dimmer out there without him.
